BRADLEY ASKS LAW FOR DISABLED VETS

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, March 1—Gen Omar N Bradley, chief of the Veterans Administration, yesterday urged enactment of a law benefiting more than 115,000 disabled veterans.

It would put into effect a schedule drawn in 1945 under which virtually all claimants would receive quick ratings for disability pensions, Bradley explained in a statement prepared for the house veterans committee.

An estimated 160,000 World War II veterans and 15,000 of the previous war would receive increases averaging $17 25 a month retroactive to the date the new schedule is effective, Bradley explained. And they wouldn't even have to apply.

Bradley also gave his backing to liberalization of the service insurance law "to more nearly conform with commercial policies." The proposed revision would

1 Let anybody be named beneficiary

2 Allow lump sum settlements

3 Permit total disability protection

The administrator also urged a third law, adding $1 000 000 to the $500 000 revolving fund for non-interest loans of up to $100 to disabled veterans starting vocational training

WYANDOT CO. INCLUDED IN COMING ROAD PROJECT

To Get $183,000 for Bridge Near Lovell.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., March 1—State Highway Director Perry T Ford announced yesterday that the public roads administration had approved 32 federal aid highway projects and 15 urban jobs worth a total of $27 000,000 and added that work might be under way by midsummer.

"It all depends on economic conditions," he said "If they are stabilized, the department will have the major part of the program under way"

Ford also announced approval of an outlay of $268 160, including $113 090 in federal funds, for continuation of the statewide highway planning survey and research during the first post war year.

Some may be advertised for letting March 12 and 27, department officials said, although they were unable to disclose which ones would come first

Approved projects on the primary program included by counties,

Wyandot Grading drainage structures, bridge and two-lane pavement 1 145 miels on US-23 south from the village of Lovell estimated cost $183,000, federal aid funds $88,000

USED CAR TRADE-INS CLARIFIED BY OPA

By The Associated Press

CINCINNATI, O., March 1 — The Office of Price Administration in a clarification of used car trade-in allowances, said today that use of a valuation substantially lower than the "blue book" or other trade table price was considered a violation

The OPA district office issued a statement to clear up what it called an "apparent misunderstanding between automobile dealers and the public regarding the allowance that can be legally made for the trade-in of a used car when purchasing a new car."

OPA said dealers might allow new car purchasers one of the following values on their old cars:

(1) The "as is" ceiling price, or

(2) a fair market sales value

Under the "as is" price regulation, the dealer would allow the ceiling price of the automobile less the amount necessary to repair it

Under the second method which may be used when the "as is" price is higher, the dealer determines from his "blue book" the fair market sales value of the top grade car of the same make and model to be traded in.

After subtracting necessary repair costs, he allows that price

Three Main Groups Must File Estimates of Income for Year

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON, March 1—Will the full tax be withheld from your 1946 income?

If not, you must estimate what the full tax will be and start paying the difference between the tax withheld (if any) and the full tax due.

You must file the estimate and make the first of four tax payments by March 15. The other payments are due June 15, Sept. 15, and next Jan 15.

Several million people will have to do this.

(Full tax is being withheld from wages and salaries up to $5,000. In this same case, if you had $6,500 in wages from which tax was withheld, you'd have to file an estimate and start paying the difference between the tax withheld on the $6,000 and the full tax on $6,500

If you had income of more than $100 from which tax was not withheld—and if it was in addition to income from which tax was withheld—and if the two incomes totaled $500 or more—you'd have to file an estimate and make the first payment on the difference between the tax withheld and the full tax due

Example. You, single, made $4 500 in wages from which full tax was withheld. But you expected to receive an additional income of $101 from rent on a farm or room, or for some service for which no tax was withheld

If you expect to make $500 or more from which no tax is withheld—like a doctor or lawyer paid in fees or a landlord living off rents—you'd have to file an estimate and start paying the tax

Eleventh in a Series

So people in this group—most people are in this group—won't have to make any estimate or quarterly payment on their 1946 tax)

Three Groups Affected

But three main groups of people will have to do so. You will

1. If your income from salary or wages in 1946 will be more than $5 000, plus $500 for each exemption besides your own.

Example. You, married, one child, will make in wages $6 000 from which tax is withheld Full tax is withheld up to $5,000, plus $500 for each exemption except your own Your exemptions—wife and child, $500 each—are $1,000 You don't file an estimate.

A Special Case

If husband and wife both have income, one cannot use the other's exemption in deciding whether or not filing an estimate is necessary.

Example: If the husband's wages for the year are estimated at $3 100 and the wife's at $900, the husband must file an estimate since his income will be over $3 000 The wife in this case, since her income is under $500, doesn't have to file an estimate unless she wants to

If husband and wife both have incomes large enough to require an estimate both must make an estimate

They can do it separately or jointly At the end of the year they can decide whether they want to make their final return jointly or separately

Suppose now you are not one of those required to file an estimate but later in the year find that you are because of changes in your income or for some other reason

In that case file your estimate by the next payment date, June 15, Sept 15, or Jan 15, 1947

As to farmers They don't have to file an estimate on their 1946 income or make any payment until Jan 15, 1947. On that date, however, they must pay in full

Congress late in 1945 made changes in the tax law to reduce the tax on all incomes

So in making your 1946 estimate you can't use the method you used in figuring out your 1945 tax The new procedure will be explained here tomorrow.

Holdup Men Pluck Ohioan Twice, Then Make Him Get More

By The Associated Press

CINCINNATI, March 1—Harry Frolich, 32-year-old auto dealer who reported losing $4,400 to holdup men Jan 3, told police Wednesday the same bandits returned Wednesday night, robbed him of $700 and then forced him to borrow an additional $400 from another auto dealer.

Frolich said four armed men were waiting for him when he returned to his salesroom Wednesday evening, Detective Chief Clem Mera reported Frolich said he recognized two of the bandits as the pair who lured him to a rooming house and robbed him Jan 3, after inserting a newspaper advertisement offering to see an automobile.

The auto dealer said the holdup men told him Wednesday night he would "have to get more money" when his wallet yielded only $700. At the point of a gun, Frolich said he drove to the auto agency of Walter Schott, nearby.

With two of the gunmen standing at his side, Frolich related he asked Schott to "lend me $500." Schott replied he had only $400 in cash, and handed over that amount after taking Frolich's personal check. Schott later told police he was unaware that Frolich was being held up.

Frolich told Mera the bandits drove back to his salesroom and tied him to a chair after taking the "borrowed" $400.

LOVE'S FAIR HORIZON

By ADELE GARRISON

I WAS glad to give the boys an opportunity to comment on the news of Georges' return of the photographs

They had come too close to the truth for comfort in their guess as to the drastic nature of Mary's deflation of Georges. So I waited quietly until they relieved the r minds about the royal fugitive's latest action.

"I suppose he was so mad at whatever she did to him," Jun or said, "that he didn't want any reminders of her around."

But Roderick was angrily and suspiciously retrospective

"Do you mean" he asked truculently, "that he intended to carry those photographs of Mary around with him wherever he was going?"

"I'm afraid he did, Roderick," I said, "but there wasn't the slightest danger of his taking them with him."

"Why?" he asked But Junior, less emotionally concerned with the question, was quicker

"You meant to have them taken from him before he went away," he said

"Yes," I answered "Mr. K', at the hideaway, would have attended to that little matter most efficiently In fact, I have no doubt that my father will see to it that all Georges' belongings are surreptitiously searched, and that nothing of which he d sapproves will be left in them"

Sigh of Relief

Roderick's sigh of relief came from the soles of h s shoes

"That's a help, anyway," he said And now, we really will quit talking Please go on"

Here is where Pelth enters the picture," I said, and they sent each other a significant glance, but did not speak

"I had sent for Mary, and was showing her the photographs, and we were talking of burning them, when Pelth, who had come into the room without our hearing her, cried out 'Oh, oh! Don't burn the pretty pictures of Mary'"

The boys simultaneously sent an amazed whistle into the air, but still kept their promise of silence

The First Hurdle

"You readily can see the difficulties we face," I said But Mary took the first hurdle She told Pelth we had said to burn the pictures over to the photographer for making up into a photograph book together with a lot of others for her grandmother s Christmas That stifled Pelth and she was sworn to secrecy, but we knew the oath would last but a few minutes

"Fortunately," I went on, 'your grandmother took her over to the other apartment for a nap, and then we faced the problem of getting Noel out of the way while we know his reaction to Georges We simply did not dare to let him know that the fugitive king had those photographs"

"Mary again solved the problem," I continued "She said she had an errand to do that would keep her from the nap everybody insists she take before the evening performance of the theater Of course Noel snapped at the bait, and said he would do the errand

"Then she said she had heard you talking about needing Boy Scout things, and meant to buy you the things you wanted But you know that and you know the ruse we employed of sending Adams to you with a warning note

Must Express Surprise

"However, Noel didn't run across you, and you're forewarned to express complete surprise and gratification at your gifts, when they come in with them And that's all the story You may talk now"

"Thanks a lot," my son said, with an impudent grin at me, "How about it, Rod" Got your face all set to grin and bow and say 'thank you' prettily when you're handed a new Scout knife?"

"Sure thing," his cousin replied, then added a canny reflection

"Perhaps he'll find one or two of the snazzy new things we haven't got," he said

"You never know," Junior said cryptically, and we left the subject for others of less interest until the ringing bell of the apartment signaled the arrival of Mary and Noel

YOUR HEALTH

By HERMAN BUNDESEN, M D

Albumin

One of the important reasons why people are living longer is many more people are having regular examinations than ever before Of course, a part of this examination is an analysis of the excretions from the kidney Sometimes it is found that these excretions contain albumin and this is a cause for concern

Whenever albumin is found in the urine, a careful study must be carried out to determine its cause. Sometimes the condition occurs in young persons who are apparently in good health

Some studies were made during World War I on 50 000 soldiers in training and it was found that one out of every 20 had albumin in the urine, although there was no disorder affecting the kidneys to account for it Some of these cases were transitory That is, the albumin was present only for a period of time and then disappeared

It is known that albumin may occur in the urine after strenuous exercise, prolonged exposure to the sun, from cold baths or the eating of large amounts of protein foods, such as meat milk and eggs It would appear, however, that by far the largest number of cases are due to posture That is, the albumin is excreted when the person is standing upright but not when he is lying down

For this reason the condition has been called orthostatic albuminuria since "ortho' means straight and 'statikos' means standing In none of these cases is the albumin due to nephritis or kidney inflammation

It is thought that when the person is in the upright position there may be some disturbance of the circulation to the kidney leading to congestion, and slowing down of the flow of blood through the veins There are some who think that the type of faulty posture known as lordosis may contribute to the disorder. In lordosis, the lower part of the spine is curved forward. Lordosis is most marked when a person is standing

Doctors Abraham I Friedman and Hilton S Read of the Medical Corps of the Army of the United States carried out some tests on a number of persons by having them placed so that their spines bent forward abnormally but they were unable to produce albumin in the urine by this procedure

It would seem, therefore, that there is some other factor in the development of orthostatic albuminuria other than lordosis. The important thing to remember about the condition is that it is a harmless one

However, whenever albumin is found in the urine a careful study must be made to be sure that it is of the harmless type and not due to some more serious condition.

Marion Mill Joins Nationwide Preparation for "Dark" Flour

The Marion Milling Co. at 185 North Prospect street, and other millers throughout the country today geared their machinery for the manufacture of a darker flour under a government order designed to help share short supplies of wheat with the hungry abroad. The local mill will be closed for the next few days in order to readjust the machinery to the processing of the new flour which will be darker and coarser than the present product. The mill will resume operation Monday, Perry Cooper, manager, said today.

The new flour, although darker and coarser, will be just as good from a edible standpoint as that manufactured now, and in the opinion of some manufacturers, will be better from a health standpoint.

Under the new order 80 per cent of the wheat will be converted into flour. Normally, Mr. Cooper said, the present rate of extraction averages around 70 per cent.

It may be several weeks before the new flour is put into use by local bakeries, as they have a supply on hand. A 30-day period has been allowed bakers to use up the present supply. Consumers will find the new product a "lot better" eating, better flavor and with more vitamins, bakers predict, and advance the opinion that the fact that it is a little darker in color and coarser in grain will be of little concern to the consumer.

President Truman, in outlining a food conservation program early this month, estimated the new flour would cut American consumption of wheat 25,000,000 bushels by July 1, an Associated Press dispatch said.

Wheat thus saved will be used to help meet this country's promise to ship 225,000,000 bushels of the grain to needy areas abroad during the first half of the year.

Belief U. S. Might Pull Troops Out of Reich Scored

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP World Traveler

FRANKFURT, GERMANY, March 1—There is abroad in the American zone a spirit of uncertainty that strikes me as being a grave embarrassment to our military government which, it should be noted, has one of the world's toughest jobs.

I refer to a rather widespread feeling in this zone, and one finds it registered among some of our Allies, that the American public is weakening in its earlier determination to occupy Germany militarily come hell or high water until all the Nazi and Prussian aggression had been knocked out of it.

Dew H.Mackenzie

This feeling has been engendered by a widespread and insistent demand by the home folk for immediate demobilization of soldier relatives, coupled with the lack of adequate replacements for those demobilized.

You hear the comment that many Americans are reverting to isolationism. I don't believe for a moment, however, that the American public has altered its views about handling Germany. Surely there has been a misinterpretation of our attitude.

It's hard to see how anyone could fail to regard with sympathetic understanding a desire to get the release of our boys who have been long in service abroad, for that's natural.

Distance Is Distorting

However, distance often distorts vision and the United States is a long way from the occupied zones of Germany.

Thus, we find a considerable amount of uncertainty over here regarding just what policy the American public wants to pursue and uncertainty, of course, is a bad thing for morale.

It's bad for the occupation forces and it's bad for the Germans, who are prone to look on it as a sign of weakness.

There is no call to deliver a homily in this column on the rehabilitation of Germany and Europe as a whole.

The Allied leadership has made the needs quite clear. Reformation of Germany and the politico-economic reconstruction of Europe depend upon a long term occupation of the Reich by the Allies—by all the major Allies. The alternative is continued disorganization and ultimately more war.

The British appear to be set for at least a 30-year occupation.

One assumes that the Russian and French have similar intentions.

Your columnist also assumes that the people of the United States have the same aim, but it would be most useful if this could be demonstrated for the benefit of the doubtful over here.

I was chatting with an American officer of high rank yesterday and asked him what he would think of American abandoning occupation of Germany.

He cast a caustic eye on me and replied:

"Well, maybe it would be a good thing from one standpoint. It all depends on what the people back home want to achieve. So long as we maintain an Army abroad and thus separate families we are lowering the birth rate in the United States. Perhaps on the whole the United States would prefer not to trouble with long military occupations but to fight a new war every 20 years.

Food for Thought

He was driving the long bow, of course, but his remark provides food for reflection. So far as Germany is concerned she shouldn't fight again for 20 years because she is too badly smashed up. It will take her far longer than that to regain even a modicum of her old strength. Still, in due course, she will recover and then the question of peace will depend on her morale at that time, and her morals will in turn depend on her associations and education between now and then.

Then there's another aspect of the situation which shouldn't be overlooked. Because of her geographical position Germany is likely to be the political balance wheel of Europe for a long time to come.

The troublesome and dangerous question of balance of power among the great nations will depend heavily on what happens in Germany. The peace and security of Europe clearly seem to turn on German rehabilitation, which will result ultimately in a state that is wholly independent of power politics. That is to say, her neutrality is vital. Should she fall under the influence of any great power it would create a situation that would invite another war.

3 INDUSTRIALISTS FACE DRAFT CHARGE

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, March 1—Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe yesterday adjourned until March 21 the fixing of a trial date for Serge M. Rubinstein, Allen Gordon Foster and James C. Hart, who are charged with violation of the Selective Service and Training act.

Rubinstein, 37, an international financier, is president of the Panhandle Producing and Refining Corp. Foster is a director of the company. Both are from New York City.

Hart, of Lee, Mass., is former president of the Taylorcraft Aviation Corp.

They were indicted Jan. 30 by a federal grand jury and all pleaded innocent.

The indictment said Rubinstein claimed in an affidavit that he was sole support of his wife, mother-in-law, two sisters-in-law, mother, aunt and an old family friend. The indictment charged the statements were false.

It was also charged in the indictment that Rubinstein and Hart filed a false questionnaire which said Rubinstein was an essential employe of Taylorcraft and that Rubinstein conspired with Foster in making false statements as to his non-liability for military service because of his work with the Panhandle firm.

All three men now are free on bail.

300 Attend Kiwanis Club 25th Anniversary Program

State and District Officers Here; Delegations Present from Other Clubs.

By LENA S. DUTTON

A banquet and program attended by approximately 300 members and guests last night at the Masonic temple marked the celebration of the silver anniversary of the Marion Kiwanis club. The occasion was a double celebration as it also marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Galion club which was founded Feb. 28, 1921. In addition to the large group of Galion Kiwanians, their wives and friends, members of the Delaware Kiwanis club, sponsors of the Marion club, state and district officers and clubs from cities in the Fourth district, which includes Marion, their wives and friends, joined the local Kiwanians and their guests for the celebration.

Speaker for the banquet was Walter S. Bunn of Dayton, governor of Ohio Kiwanis, and music for the evening was by the Greenville Kiwanis quartet. The welcome was extended by Anson E. Pickerel, president of the Marion club. Presiding as toastmaster was Ralph E. Carhart.

Decorations in the hall were in keeping with the anniversary theme and carried out in the Kiwanis colors of blue and white combined with silver. The walls were hung with wide blue panels which formed a background for the Kiwanis emblem in the club colors, and showered from white twigs caught to each chandelier were blue and white streamers centered with a large blue "K." Tall white and blue tapers in low crystal holders on the tables illuminated the large dining room for the seating of the guests.

The speaker's table was centered with a low bowl filled with blue and white carnations and across the front was a silver draping caught with a Kiwanian motif. Marking the places were programs in silver embossed with blue, and blue napkins with "1921 Marion Kiwanis Club 1946" lettered in silver. As the guests arrived the women were presented red roses.

Tribute to Officers

In welcoming the guests Mr. Pickerel paid tribute to the officers and members both past and present and congratulated the Galion club on its twin anniversary.

Under the caption, "25 Years of Service and Fun," A. W. Kette, a charter member and past president of the club, sketched the highlights of the club's quarter of a century in the community. The history revealed the club's organization in January of 1921 by a group that included Dr. James W. McMurray as president. Grant E. Mouser Jr., Ben T. Wiant, Earl T. Smart, L. Montel and E. H. Cowan as directors. The first meeting was held in the old Busy Bee restaurant located in what is now the Marion Federal Savings & Loan Co. office and the assembly included President-elect Warren G. Harding, Senator Frank B. Willis of Delaware and a delegation from the Delaware club. This was followed by a charter party later in the Masonic temple with Edmund F. Arras of Columbus and delegations from Columbus and other clubs in the district as guests. The history revealed two and one-half decades of service to the community, the citizens and institutions. Through the years the club aided underprivileged children, sponsored recreation facilities for the youth of the city, and through the war years was in the vanguard in the city's war time program. An outstanding achievement of the club was the sponsoring of a "Go To Church Campaign."

Mr. Bunn Speaks

Loyal support to churches and educational institutions, the establishment of a proper environment for youth, respect and a sympathetic understanding of older citizens and the exercise and encouragement of the ballot were pointed out by Governor Bunn as the obligation of Kiwanians in their community in his talk on "What Do I Owe My Community?"

It is a sad commentary on our American people that we have such a high rate of illiteracy, he commented in urging the support of educational institutions. In furthering the establishment of a proper environment for the youth of the country, he said: "Youth will be the administrators of tomorrow and what we present to them will be their interpretation in churches, schools and government of tomorrow."

He paid tribute to the pioneers of the country and also expressed his appreciation of work of the pioneers of the Kiwan's club. In closing he pointed to the achievements and work of the past officers and members of the club as a challenge to make 1946 "the best year of all." Governor Bunn brought greetings from the international and state clubs and expressed the hope that Ohio would be well represented at the International convention to be held at Atlantic City in June.

Dr. F. A. Stengel, a member of the Marion club and lieutenant governor of this district, represented the clubs of the Fourth division and the Delaware club was presented by Harold J. Grigsby a past president of the local club. The response was by Dr. Ben Arneson of Delaware who presented Wayne Hilbarn, president, other officers of the Delaware club.

Edmund F. Arras of Columbus, a past president of Kiwanis International, who presented the charter to the Marion club in 1921, was introduced by John H. Clark, a past president and charter member of the Marion club. Quoting a page from the 25 years of Kiwanian history he reminded his listeners that from the fall of 1920 to the spring of 1921 Warren G. Harding was inaugurated president of the United States, Frank B. Willis of Delaware went to the U. S. Senate and Col. Ben Hough, also of Delaware, was made judge of the supreme court of Ohio, and the Marion Kiwanis club was born.

Dean Talbot of Galion, spoke of the work and achievements of that club along civic lines and in the state and international organizations.

Musical Program

An entertaining program of vocal numbers was presented by the Greenville quartet made up of Francis Hittle, Roy Kester, Earl Hittle and Edward L. Schwartz, with Glenn Hartzell as accompanist. The vocalists took their audience back a quarter of a century with "The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise," "The Old Songs," and other melodies, and closed their part of the entertainment with a group of character numbers including a Gallagher and Sheen interpretation by Francis Hittle and Mr. Schwartz.

To open the program L. G. Jones directed the singing of "America," by the group, with William Dowler, accompanist for the Marion club, at the piano. Following the pledge of allegiance to the Flag, the invocation was spoken by Dr. S. M. Ingmire pastor of Epworth Methodist church.

Group singing later in the program was directed by Leonard Young.

Guests from out of the city included Governor and Mrs. Bunn of Dayton, Mr. and Mrs. Arras of Columbus, Pete Land of Akron, executive secretary of Ohio Kiwanis district, members of the Kiwanis quartet of Greenville and their wives, Walter Alto of Sandusky, immediate past lieutenant governor, Melvin Roscover of Ada, lieutenant governor of Division No. 1, Herbert Forester of Dayton, trustee of Kiwanis international and clubs from Galion, Delaware, Mt. Gilead, Sandusky, Fostoria, Crestline, Fremont and Ada. Present also were heads of local service clubs, J. Wendell Wiant of the Rotary club and

Man in City Hospital After Bout on Street

Paul Traxler, 30, of near Upper Sandusky is in city hospital with minor head injuries as the result of what police said was a scuffle on West Center street yesterday afternoon.

Police made an investigation of the incident at the hospital after Traxler was taken there in the Boyd & Unsapher ambulance. They said no arrests would be made unless one of the principals filed charges.

Police reported Traxler was injured when he suddenly took a punch at a Darius street resident as the two met on the street. The Darius street man in turn struck Traxler, knocking him down. Traxler's head struck an object, rendering him unconscious.

He is expected to be released from the hospital today. Police said the incident occurred near the C. & O. railroad crossing.

FRIDAY, MARCH 1, 1946

Through the Red Cross

MARION county's Red Cross goal this year is $38,300, not much more than half as large as the 1945 goal, but the largest sum ever sought in peacetime.

This is because it is America's unfinished business to do everything in its power for men and women who still need help. Of the quota $23,000 is for use in Marion county and $15,300 is for the national organization of the Red Cross, mostly for work with servicemen still overseas and for veterans in hospitals.

We do not give our money to the Red Cross, but to others, through the Red Cross. It exists to give us an opportunity to help. Its job has been done so well that in every part of the world the Red Cross symbol means there is a helping hand nearby.

Marion county's Red Cross Fund Campaign should be oversubscribed as a gesture of confidence in a great organization that has done the greatest job in its history and is eager to keep up its good work of relieving human suffering.

It Was the Real Thing

AT the close of 100 days of the General Motors strike, Walter Reuther's original warning to workers that it was going to be the "real thing" has an added punch.

While it is by no means the worst work stoppage in the country's industrial history, either as to length or effect, the General Motors strike marks a genuine crisis in industrial relations.

From it has stemmed the most of the talking points in the postwar strike epidemic. It is destined to leave its mark on the automobile industry for years to come, not only in production statistics and loss of wages to workers, but in long-range intangibles. Many families never will recover from the setback they have been given. The corporation's position in the industry will be affected. Detroit, which has felt the brunt of the blow, will be a long time recovering from the shock.

All these things were foreseen by Mr. Reuther, the leader of the strike. He warned his followers they were scheduled for the "real thing." In the last 100 days many Americans have been wondering just what the "real thing" may be in Walter Reuther's thinking. They have been wondering what he and other strike leaders have in mind that is so important hundreds of thousands of working men and women must not work.

Voluntary Belt-Tightening

PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S hope of voluntary food conservation is foolish. His recognition of the spread of famine in Europe and Asia and of the necessity for doing something about it needs to include recognition of the weakness in voluntary belt-tightening.

There are many of us who can be depended on to pull our weight in any voluntary program for a good cause. During the war, many Americans resented the bureaucratic assumption that everybody was dishonest until proved otherwise and that compulsion, therefore, was necessary.

We conserved tires and gasoline because conservation was logical and necessary. We did not deal in the black market, or practice any of the sly dodges that made it possible to stay inside the law but to live outside rationing restrictions. But we were forced to admit before the war was over that what could have been done with only volunteer conservation would not have been enough. There were too many chiselers. They are still with us.

Voluntary food conservation would amount to taking advantage of the portion of the population that always can be depended on to do what is asked of it. All others would obey the only law they recognize, which is to get the most they can. As it became plain that chiselers were having a hey-day, the program would break down under the weight of evidence that "the other fellow" was not supporting it.

If Mr. Truman is convinced that food conservation is essential in the United States, he should take steps to reestablish rationing. Even then there will be plenty of loopholes.

With the Paragraphers

SOMETHING WRONG

Too many wurds in the inglish langwige are spelled diffruntly from the way they are pronownsed. There hav bin sum faintharted attemps to improve the situayshun but they don't get very far. It isn't only the spelling; it's also the way wurds are ured. If you say "freez" and "froz," why shouldn't you say "skweez" and "skwoz?" And if it's "mowse" and "mise," why not say "hows" and "hise?" A wurd such as "cough" reely ort to be spelled "koff," and if ther's enything to the idea that usage gives athoraty, then "government" should long have becum "guvvermunt." Speeking in general turms, we are in fayvor of a spelling sistem that maches the ufonistic ellements of our muther tung.—The Wall Street Journal.

WHAT'S TO BE DONE?

Experts say enough soil to make a 100-acre farm passes a given point on the Missouri River every five minutes, and once an hour on the lowe Kaw, and Marion Vaughn wonders in the Bonne Springs Chieftain how long we will allow this waste to go on and put up with floods and do nothing about it.—Kansas City Times.

News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON

Finds It's No Use Worrying About Washington.

ST AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 1 — A five weeks trip through five southeastern states has proved a lesson to me in fretting about Washington.

When the Wyatt housing program came out, with its scheme for a government cash bounty to high-cost producers of building materials so as to avoid a price increase and inflation, I went to some leading men in the construction industry, and asked:

Q.—"Tell me off the record what you really think about this new housing plan. Will it work?"

A.—"We have not read it."

Q.—"You have not read the Washington plan which proposes to revolutionize systems in your own industry?"

A.—Well, we have been pretty busy."

Q.—"But how can you operate without keeping up with the Washington plan of control?"

A.—"Our experience has been that Washington has a new plan every day—or well, anyway every week." By the time we understand the first one, the second one changes it all around. If we kept up with Washington plans, we could not keep up with our business. It is just a question of keeping up with Washington or keeping up with our work, so we keep up with our work."

Disillusioned

I left somewhat disillusioned about the awesomeness of the federal planning, but still skeptical that these construction people knew their business. My doubts were dispelled a few days later, when, (amazingly to me), Washington announced an increase of $5 per thousand on lumber to follow the $5 a ton increase in the price of steel—the two basic materials of the construction industry. Surely enough, these fellows were right. Before the subsidies to avoid price increases had been considered in congress, price increases had been announced in the two lines which mattered most.

Undaunted, when the wage-price-profits program was announced, I sought out leading business men and asked:

Q.—"How will your business be affected by the plan to increase wages by 30 per cent over prewar, while limiting price increases to give you a pre-war profit, restricted to the number of dollars you made then, dollars now worth half as much?"

A.—"What plan is that?"

Q.—"Why the new Bowles anti-inflation plan. It was in all the papers."

A.—"Oh that. We heard something about it. The papers said we can apply for a higher ceiling right away instead of waiting six months, but we did not look into it."

Q.—"Yes, but the stock market slid down three days running in the biggest drop since the last depression, and the expert analysts tell me, with apparent soundness, that it would put the capitalist economy into a straitjacket which will surely squeeze the life out of it."

Work That Way

A.—"Our experience has been that these Washington plans seldom work out the way they say."

Q.—"You mean Washington says one thing, and then does another?"

A.—"Well, yes in a way. They have to, because they get bullets up. I also heard that the nation's No. 1 nudist announced a global campaign to do away with clothing. I just do not think it will work out that way. I will bet you 2 to 1 people will be wearing clothes next year, and possibly the same clothes, unless we get production."

Q.—"Yes, but Washington did not sponsor that plan. Washington has great power to work its will."

A.—"Well, you can take my word for this—It can't be done. If wages and costs go up, prices will go up one way and another. I do not care what Washington says or does. And if wages, material costs and prices go up, profits must go up. So why should I worry and get myself another ulcer."

My disillusionment expanded. It became complete a few days later when the stock market took the same view about profits, righted itself, and went merrily on its well-advised way, for a few days, and then changed its mind a third time to assume again its initial pessimistic downward course.

LONDON—Trygve Lie of Norway is a big man with a big job. As the first secretary-general of the United Nations, the former foreign minister is saddled with one of the toughest executive tasks in the world. Upon his broad shoulders rests the responsibility of seeing that no breakdown develops in the routine operational machinery of the new peace and security agency.

"Sure, it's a tough job," Lie agrees. "There could be a lot of headaches, but then"—and here one sees the dominating self-confidence of the carpenter's son who skyrocketed into the top bracket of international diplomacy—"I'm not allergic to headaches."

To those who for years have known the genial, quiet-spoken Norwegian this is not idle boasting but merely his way of asserting that obstacles are unimportant to those with a will to succeed.

Man of Activity

Like everything that Lie does—skiing, negotiating government loans and treaties of friendship, planning for his family and entertaining—he has tackled his new job with thoroughness of detail aimed at perfection.

"Give me two months," he says, "and I will be on top of this job. Right now it is tough.

Since Lie undertook his new duties he has found little time for the family he adores and the friends he loves to have drop in for a chat and a drink. He seldom gets to bed before two in the morning. He is up by seven, bathes, shaves, breakfasts and hurries off to the secretariat offices in Church House.

He Has Three Daughters

A devoted family man, Lie has found little time during these first hectic days of office for his attractive, perpetually-smiling wife and his daughter, Sidsel, widow of a young Norwegian airman killed shortly after their marriage in 1944. He tries to have dinner with the two each night but more often there are guests and the talk is business talk.

But at home in Norway even while foreign minister, Lie could be found out on the ski runs with his wife and two younger daughters, Guri and Mette. Being from a skiing land, all the Lies are expert. And despite his build—Lie hits the scales at 250—he has the grace and ease on skis of a thinner, lighter man.

Lie has come a long way in his 50 years and in the strides he has taken he has attracted attention of statesmen throughout the world.

In 1941 when Lie became Norwegian foreign minister, Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, then U. S. ambassador to Europe's exiled governments, commented:

"Watch Trygve Lie; he's a man with a star in his pocket."

Planned Norway's Future

Lie worked quietly in London at his new job, a difficult job at that time. His people were under the Nazi yoke and Lie was trying to help them as best he could. Confident that one day the Germans would be kicked out, Lie helped forge a Norwegian foreign policy that would stand up when the shooting had stopped.

Lie took over his new task knowing that his choice as secretary-general came as result of a compromise between great powers who were pushing their own candidates. He recognizes that he was nominated not only on his personal record but even more because he represents a small power recognized as a leading contributor to world peace work throughout more than a generation.

Man Without Country

"I consider my election," he says, "a tribute to my country of which I am its representative. Now my job is that of representative of 51 nations and in time others. In a way I am a man without a country. The interests of the world are my interests. To that end I devote my work in the future."

As a boy in heavy shoes and woolen coat, growing up in Oslo's working district from which his father went each morning with dinner pail, saw, hammer and nails, Trygve Halvdan Lie never thought even in his wildest dreams—and he was a dreamer—that one day he would hold one of the world's key posts.

He entered the labor movement while a law student at Oslo university, following its rise to leadership in Norwegian politics.

Graduating in 1919, Lie became secretary of the Labor party—a step that eventually was to lead him into the Norwegian ministry of trade and industry. He took time in 1931 to write two books on labor law.

Lie entered John Nygaardsvold's Labor government as minister of justice when the cabinet was formed in 1935. In 1937 he was elected to parliament and two years later was made minister of trade, industry, shipping and fishing.

When the German attack came, Lie escaped with King Haakon and the government, moved north dodging Nazi bullets and finally was evacuated by the British to London where Halvdan Koht resigned as foreign minister and Lie took over the difficult post.

Plastic Nylon

Molding powder of nylon, five types of it, is now in commercial production. As a plastic, according to the makers, it is tough and able to stand a temperature as high as 380 degrees F. so it can be sterilized with steam. It burns slowly. Uses suggested include valve seats and gaskets for pumps and faucets.—O. S. U. Science and Appliance.

Pensions in G. I. Romances

VA Studies Tangled Claims for Allowances.

By ROBERT GEIGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Attorneys are untangling thousands of American soldier romances to decide whether sweethearts may collect widow's pensions and their children may be paid children's benefits.

Under special scrutiny today are hundreds of proxy marriages to which GI Joe resorted when he was about to be shipped overseas and wanted to marry the home-town sweetheart he was leaving behind.

Not a single claim arising from an American proxy marriage has yet been held valid by U. S. courts, attorneys for the Veterans Administration say.

Widow and child claims also hinge on such things as common law, polygamous and tribal marriages as well as "affairs of the moment."

At stake are widows' pensions for such girls as the ones in Great Britain that American doughboys met and loved but couldn't marry legally because of war and the rules of their commanding officers, before they were off to Normandy.

Take Generous View.

"The United States is trying to lean over backwards—nay, we sometimes fall over backwards—in interpreting some of these claims in favor of widows and children," said one attorney on the staff of Edward E. Odom, Veterans Administration solicitor.

The claim experts, in some cases, call a child legal but don't recognize the marriage.

"In other words, there are no illegitimate children, there are only illegitimate parents," they explain. "We don't believe in visiting the sins of the father upon the children."

Many British girls cannot collect widows' pensions because of this ruling, but their children are receiving children's benefits from the U. S. government.

Children's benefits are paid:

1. If the marriage of a Yank to a foreign girl was legitimate. In such a case, the girl receives a widow's pension, too.

2. If the marriage was not legitimate, but the soldier acknowledged in a casual letter or in other writing that he was the father of the child; or if he was ordered by court to support the child.

3. If, lacking indisputable proof, the Veterans Administrator believes the child to be the offspring of an American soldier.

Interpretation of Common Law.

If Great Britain and other foreign nations recognized common law marriages, many more women could collect widow's pensions.

The VA (Veterans Administration) recognizes common-law marriages if they are legal in the state where they occur. But as far as VA attorneys know, this is the case only in the United States, and in only 28 states.

Polygamous and tribal marriages occasionally are the basis of claims involving western Indians and most are decided according to individual circumstances. Only one wife may receive a widow's pension and her children alone are entitled to benefits.

Ends Housing Problem

By The Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va.—Major William E. Tucker, who served 27 months in the transportation corps in Europe, came to Richmond to enter the Medical College of Virginia. He couldn't find a house or an available contractor.

So Tucker, himself, applied for a building permit.

"Have you ever built a house?" he was asked.

"No," replied Tucker, "but I can learn."

Today, the house, to be a story and a half, with five rooms downstairs and three rooms upstairs, is well under way, being built by Tucker and three GI helpers, all still dressed in uniform. Tucker drew the plans from ideas he found in magazines.

CAN YOU REMEMBER—

Away back when anybody with fair eyesight could tell the difference between a $5,000 one-family home and a $125 chicken house?

Buffalo Bill was born 100 years ago this week and we feel sorry for kids to whom he is a remote figure. What a thriller the Buffalo Bill Wild West and Congress of Rough Riders was to the small fry of yesterday! It came every year back home, and one of our earliest memories is seeing Buffalo Bill in the flesh, riding down Whalley avenue in an open buggy, at the head of the Injuns, cowboys and buffalo hunters. The show was held in Westville, just back of the Nick Hubinger mansion. Once, lacking money to get in, we climbed up a tree to see the show and we almost imagine we got riddled by straw bullets in the hold-up of the Deadwood stage.

Thru a Glass Darkly

By Truman Twill

In the care and treatment of eyeglasses, the first thing to remember is the famous remark of the ballplayer fanned by the great Walter Johnson on three pitched balls—"You can't hit what you can't see."

For a whole day, up to this 57-58-59th minute, this writer has fumbled through the trivial tasks the boss requires. But spots keep appearing before his eyes. Things were in a miasma of uncertainty.

At one point, the boss was overheard to remark, "I see Egghead is addled again, but since the returning veterans will be home and we can turn him out to pasture." Remarks like that cut deep.

But finally a dangling participle got loose and in the ensuing chase there was an accident that bashed the careless keeper's cheaters half an inch into the bridge of his nose—and suddenly light dawned.

When the glasses were removed and placed on a picture of a Florida cutie with no more clothes on than could be found with a microscope, it looked as if the girl had put on a blackrobe. The trouble was on the glasses. The spots before the eyes were part of the smear.

It was a special mixture. We probably never had cooked up a better one and the recipe is given gladly to help the armed forces camouflage experts.

Take a pair of child's thumbprints, one on each lens, and rub until they look like mist. Add splats of bacon grease and oat meal. Rub until mellow and season with bubbles from carbonated water.

Apply criss-cross pattern of loose hair held in place by shaving soap, marinated in face lotion. Decorate edges with frill of mashed potatoes and okra.

Dust whole lightly with wife's face powder by leaving glasses lying on dresser and blow off place with over-layer of hand lotion. Run the brush combings and cigaret ashes.

In a word, boss, don't frown at the guy behind the glasses. Go to work on the glasses. Make him take them off and hold them under the faucet every morning before you start riding the limited for what he can't see. Sure he can't see. He can't even see you.

All other persons employed will come from the Marion district. A personnel man from Rockford will be at the plant in about 30 days to interview persons for employment. Superintendent in charge of local operations will be LaVerne Kreuter of Rockford. He will make his home in Marion. Frank R. Warton, vice president of the Ken-L-Products division in Rockford, will supervise the plant from his Rockford office.

Besides processing horse meat for dog food the company temporarily will process and can horse meat for overseas shipments. Company officials pointed out, however, that overseas shipments would be only a minor operation.

Herbert James, Chicago engineer for Quaker Oats and assigned to the Marion project said the plant would be one of the most modern in the country. The building is being constructed with all the latest sanitary installations. Walls and partitions are being made of glazed tile and glass block so that they may be washed down daily with water of 160 degrees temperature.

Shower rooms, wash rooms, lavatories and a dining room for employes will be among the features. Since gas will be used for fuel, there is expected to be no smoke from the plant. Every operation will be under supervision of the meat inspection division, U. S. department of agriculture. After the horses are killed the meat will be chilled and cooled.

Equipment Automatic

Automatic machinery will mix the meat, fill and seal the cans and send them to pressure cookers. A complete production line will be set so there will be an even flow of cans through the various stages of processing. Machinery is expected to arrive in about 30 days.

All by-products, with the exception of the roofs, will be dried, ground, sacked and sold as fertilizer. Hides will be sold for leather goods. None of the by-products will be wasted.

Storage pens are being built on the west side of the building where horses will be kept until they are ready to be slaughtered. A truck dock for outgoing shipments will be located on the east side of the plant, and railroad sidings will be on both the east and west side.

The company picked Marion as an ideal location after an extensive survey of horse population was conducted. Horses from all parts of Ohio and neighboring states, and some from Canada, will be shipped to the plant by truck or rail.

The Marion packing company building has been vacant since 1927, and since then businessmen and Chamber of Commerce representatives have been trying to find a suitable company for it. The three-story structure has about 70,000 feet of floor space, all of which will be utilized by the new concern.

Raze Old Building at County Home

An old building, believed to be about 90 years old, and used at various times as a jail and hospital by the Marion county home, is being torn down by employes of the county engineer's office.

The 36 by 50 foot brick structure stands east of the county home building. It was abandoned about 1923. Before that time it was used as quarters for mentally ill.

There were four cells in the single story structure, each lined with sheet iron. Part of the material will be salvaged and sold and the rest will be used for repair work around the county home.

BILL URGED TO FREE AP FROM TRUST ACT

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, March 1—Rep. Mason (R-Ill) yesterday called for action on legislation to exempt mutual news-gathering cooperatives from provisions of the Sherman Anti-trust act.

He introduced a bill to do that last November but no action has been taken on it.

In a statement for the congressional record, Mason said he had reviewed the supreme court decision in The Associated Press case last year and found that it followed "the present-day tendency of the supreme court to read into an act something clearly not intended by the legislative branch when it passed that act."

The court in a 5 to 3 decision last June upheld a lower court ruling that AP by-laws restrain trade and therefore violate the Sherman Anti-Trust act. The tribunal directed the by-laws be amended so as to prevent AP members from considering the competitive aspects of an application for membership. This was done.

"Neither in the debate on the Sherman Anti-Trust bill, nor in committee report that accompanied the bill, nor yet even in the printed report of the committee hearings on the bill," Mason said, "can be found even a slight indication that the congress intended the act to apply to the AP or any other mutual news-gathering agency.

Yet, he added, the supreme court held to the contrary.

"Freedom of the press," Mason declared, "is a heritage deeply embedded in our traditions and inseparably linked to our freedom. Down through the ages people have fought for freedom of expression. • • • I cannot believe that any member of congress who voted for the Sherman act ever intended to tread upon this fundamental freedom which guarantees to the American people unobstructed channels for gathering and disseminating news."

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

NOT A "REST CENTER"

Editor of The Star: I have been very interested of late in seeing the great amount of publicity being given to the Biarritz American University here at Biarritz, France. The recent article concerning the picture spread which featured Sgt. Ray Feaver was interesting. And, more recent, the 14 January edition of Life magazine, which I have not had the opportunity of seeing.

Lest the citizen-taxpayer back home get the idea that BAU is more or less a 'rest center' and an expensive way to spend the government's money, may we who have had the opportunity to attend the University testify to the fact that it is a serious institution of learning, and a lot of hard work accompanies the pleasant surroundings in which we find ourselves.

The average student carries some 15 hours of class and laboratory work a week, which will compare favorably with the work week of a college student in a university at home. Upon completion of the work here, students are given certificates crediting them with the proper amount of hours and these certificates are, at the present time, being honored by some of the largest Universities in the States.

So, although the setting is indeed idyllic, and it is a "strange" institution, it is nonetheless an institution of higher learning, which the students from Marion can well attest.

Also, we can say truthfully, this is one of the best things the Army has ever put into effect.

Wall Streeters, while believing that the list was due for a further technical comeback in the wake of the sharpest slump in more than eight years, still inclined to cautious operations.
